Dear Friends,

On August 13th, 1989 I lost my best friend Brandon Cross to complications related to AIDS, making this the 30-year anniversary of his passing. In honor of Brandon and the many other friends who have succumbed to AIDS, and in support of those who have survived the pandemic, I labor as a volunteer with the Frank Harr Foundation on a project to bring the AIDS Memorial Quilt to Wilmington, North Carolina. – Edward Adams

In August of 1993, Ed and I traveled from San Francisco with two special memorial quilt panels to contribute to the display of the entire Quilt on the lawn of the National Mall in Washington, DC. One panel, I had made myself for Walt Campbell, my partner of eleven years who passed in 1990. The other panel I had contributed to for my dear friend, Scott McDowell, who passed from AIDS in New York City in 1992. That pilgrimage proved to be a significant event that helped us strengthen our shared love for lost friends, and each other. – Jeffrey Mills

In a war against a disease that has no cure, The AIDS Memorial Quilt has evolved as our most potent tool in the effort to educate against the lethal threat of AIDS. By revealing the humanity behind the statistics, The AIDS Memorial Quilt helps teach compassion, triumphs over taboo, stigma and phobia, and inspires individuals to take direct responsibility for their own well-being and that of their family, friends and community.

The Frank Harr Foundation, Cameron Art Museum and several other community partners are preparing to host "The Quilt" in Wilmington from November 30th, 2019 thru December 15th, 2019 in commemoration of World AIDS Day. We need your support to make this happen. We ask you to please consider a monetary gift of any amount to help bring this amazing memorial Quilt display to Wilmington.
